- Create a community engagement task force

- Define community engagement
- Ensuring intentional engagement of community in decision making

Jenny Wang, Public Health Department, presented information on the “Water is Life” campaign as a best practice of community engagement. The Public Health Department’s Nutrition Services Program engaged a community in East Oakland in the “Water is Life” campaign, which promoted drinking more water. The campaign was deemed successful because survey answers supported that residents in the area drink more water because of the campaign.

Melinda Hall, Executive Director, Hayward Promise Neighborhood, gave a presentation on the Hayward Promise Neighborhood as a best practice for community engagement. Hayward Promise Neighborhood is a federally funded opportunity that began in 2011. In collaboration with its partners, Hayward Promise Neighborhood (HPN) offers over 35 programs and services designed to support HPN residents, families and children and students. Hayward Promise Neighborhood builds upon current resources within Hayward by using its funding to expand existing programs to be made available for Hayward Promise Neighborhood families.

Dr. Larissa Estes, Director, ALL IN, presented a proposed plan to host initial key interviews with agency directors and partners to inform the focus group design, host agency/partner listening sessions through focus groups and conduct follow up calls and meetings for additional details.
